Balancing Practice, Rest, and Everyday Life

Across

4. Joining
an art show without perfect pencil control.

7. A creative activity possible with different materials.

9. Care
meant to support life, not replace it.

11. A bird picture can be this, even with wonky feet.

12. A means of improving a skill, not life's only purpose.

14. When supported practice finally helps with ordinary chores.

15. Harsh
lighting that may make a clinic trip harder.

19. The reason for therapy, beyond acing an exercise.

21. An action made without directing each tiny step.

22. Change the way you draw without quitting art.

23. A clinic success worth bringing into daily life.

24. Travel that uses effort before therapy even starts.

Down

1. A broad-tipped alternative to a fine pencil.

2. Time
with a friend that's worth protecting.

3. What keeps therapy from crowding out everyday living.

5. An art supply that doesn't need a needle-sharp point.

6. What a sketchbook can offer without perfect lines.

8. A
drink container that may benefit from a lid.

10. Why
a useful movement matters outside treatment.

13. What a less glaring treatment room may provide.

16. Something that deserves calendar space alongside practice.

17. Where a clinic skill may get its next assignment.

18. Something
learned in therapy to use beyond the clinic.

20. The body part that may jerk during delicate drawing.
